Legal Issues and Controversial Court Cases

As National Public Radio's Justice correspondent, Ari Shapiro has occupied a front-row seat as the government's approach to fighting terrorism has changed since 9/11. Shapiro will provide behind-the-scenes anecdotes about some of the most timely, most heated debates in Washington, offering a distinctive look at the rarely-seen machinations that shape the way the United States fights terrorism.

The fight against terrorism is closely tied to some of our country's most high-profile court cases. Mr. Shapiro will share his perspective on what really happens in the cases people care the most about.
