COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA

v.

VICTOR COLLIER

*ADMISSIBILITY OF EVIDENCE / WARRANTLESS
SEARCH OF HOME*

Where 2 and 4 year old children were discovered alone in home and no exigent circumstances existed, officer's warrantless excursion into upstairs bedroom in search of parent was without legal justification.

WARRANTLESS SEARCH OF HOME / PLAIN VIEW

Officer exceeded scope of search for parent by going upstairs, entering a bedroom and peeking into open dresser drawer.

SUPPRESSION OF EVIDENCE / SEARCH WARRANT

Because search warrant was premised on illegal search of upstairs bedroom, all evidence found pursuant to warrant must be suppressed.

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF ERIE COUNTY,
PENNSYLVANIA CRIMINAL DIVISION No. 687 of 2011

Appearances: Justin Panighetti, Esq., Attorney for the Commonwealth
 Anthony A. Logue, Esq., Attorney for Defendant

OPINION

Connelly, J., August 18, 2011

On November 17, 2010 Officer Oborski of the Erie Police Department was on patrol when he was dispatched to 2702 Van Buren Street at a little after 1:00 p.m. as to two (2) children unattended. At the location, the officer knocked at the door, and a two-year-old answered. The other child, a four-year-old, was on the phone with the Office of Children & Youth (OCY) who was attempting to find a parent for a third child who was sick at school. The officer asked if any parents were at home, and the four-year-old told him her father was upstairs. He asked her to get him. She went upstairs, then returned saying that he wasn't there. The officer then went upstairs to look for an adult and finding no one began to look for identifying information. As he moved toward a dresser with an open top drawer, he smelled the odor of marijuana, shined his flashlight into the drawer and observed what he believed to be marijuana. He called vice unit officers who arrived, viewed the drugs and obtained a search warrant, executed it, and found other drugs and paraphernalia. Before the vice unit arrived, OCY arrived to care for the children and shortly thereafter Mrs. Collier, the child's mother, came home and then the father after the mother had called him.

Neither Defendant contests the fact that the officer had a right to enter the home without a warrant based on the exigencies of the two (2) young children being left in the home alone. Such being the case, the officer, for the safety and protection of the children, entered legally without a warrant. Once the officer ascertained the children were safe with him, was informed that the father was not upstairs,¹ and that OCY was on the phone and would be arriving there shortly to care for the children, and had no information that the children were in any specific danger from anyone inside or outside of the house, there were no exigent circumstances to justify a warrantless search of the upstairs bedroom. Under the circumstances, the officer had ample time to obtain a search warrant, the children were secure and cared for, no evidence needed to be secured or was in danger of being destroyed, and no one was in danger. Simply put the officer's warrantless excursion into the upstairs bedroom was without legal justification. Commonwealth v. Lee, 972 A.2d 1 (Pa.Super. 2009). And the further intrusion into the dresser drawer in the Defendant's bedroom after smelling marijuana in that room is not compatible with a plain view exception to a warrantless search under the circumstances.² As stated above the Officer should not have been there without a warrant, but the smell of contraband should have put him on notice he needed a search warrant to go any farther. Additionally, peeking into the open dresser drawer was in excess of his scope of searching for a person or his unnecessary quest for identification, Commonwealth v. Perez, 595 A.2d 1315 (Pa. 1991). The officer did not have a legal prior justification which provided lawful right of access to the upstairs bedroom or to the items in the dresser drawer. Commonwealth v. Norris, 446 A.2d 246 (Pa. 1982).

Further, because the illegal search of the bedroom dresser formed the basis of the subsequent search warrant, the search and all drugs, paraphernalia, and evidence found pursuant thereto are the fruits of the prohibited conduct and also subject to suppression. Wong Sun v. U.S., 371 U.S. 471 (1963); Commonwealth McEnany, 667 A.2d 1143 (Pa. Super. 1995).

¹ Indeed the child, specifically at the officer's request, had gone upstairs and reported that the father was not there. The officer had no information or evidence to indicate otherwise.

² Obviously the name of the parent could have been ascertained from a neighbor, from the children, an OCY inquiry, local records, the third child's school or a search of the premises pursuant to a warrant. Indeed in all likelihood OCY had the names of the parents from school authorities who had called them and OCY called the residence and was speaking to the four-year-old when the officer arrived.

ORDER

AND NOW, to-wit, this 18th day of August, 2011 it is hereby ORDERED that Defendant's Omnibus Pre-Trial Motion For Relief, I: Motion For Suppression of Evidence is GRANTED; II: Motion to Dismiss - Double Jeopardy is hereby DENIED.
