JUDGE SEAN MCLAUGHLIN ASSUMES ROLE AS CHIEF JUDGE OF U.S. DISTRICT COURT

by Tracy Carbasho

Colleagues say Sean McLaughlin will perpetuate a legacy of excellent leadership as chief judge of the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania.

“He will carry on the legacy of leadership we have enjoyed most recently under Chief Judges Gary Lancaster and Donetta Ambrose,” said District Court Judge Nora Barry Fischer. “He will continue to build on the achievements of our past chief judges and will work for the betterment of the court and all of the litigants and counsel we serve.”

McLaughlin, who has been serving as a federal judge in Erie since 1994, was scheduled to take over as chief judge in September 2014 when Lancaster would have turned 65 and assumed senior judge status. However, McLaughlin began his duties as chief judge much earlier than expected on April 25 after Lancaster passed away.

“While I am very honored to be the chief judge of this district, I am deeply saddened by the circumstances which brought it about,” he said. “Judge Lancaster was a good friend and a fine judge.”

Jurists throughout the district were distraught by the news of Lancaster’s death, but their grief was tempered by knowing McLaughlin is a qualified successor.

“He was a skilled trial lawyer before he went on the bench,” noted Fischer. “He has great analytical and listening skills, a very even temperament, a solid work ethic, and a loyal and dedicated staff.”

McLaughlin, a native of Erie, received his law degree from the Georgetown University Law Center in 1980 and began his legal career as a law clerk to District Court Judge William Knox, who heard cases in both Pittsburgh and Erie. He worked in private practice in Erie from 1981 until 1994.

“He is no stranger to the Pittsburgh courthouse, having begun his legal career as a law clerk on this court, which is when we first met,” said Robert Barth Jr., clerk of the District Court. “Chief Judge McLaughlin had already begun attending ACBA Federal Court Section monthly meetings and participated as a panelist in several programs by the Academy of Trial Lawyers of Allegheny County.”

McLaughlin believes the biggest challenge he will face initially is striking an appropriate balance between the time devoted to purely administrative matters and to serving on the bench. He wants to ensure that his administrative responsibilities do not impact the efficient disposition of his cases.

The chief judge receives all communications from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, presides over all judicial proceedings he attends, and makes all court committee assignments within the district. In addition, he is the liaison with the bar associations in the Western District, oversees the U.S. Probation Office in the district, and appoints all probation officers on the advice of the chief probation officer.

“The most significant responsibilities of the chief judge would include assisting in the development and implementation of court management and long-range plans, overseeing court staff and the operations of the court, and serving as the general point of contact between judges on the court, other courts, agencies and the public,” said McLaughlin.

On the other hand, the most rewarding part of his job is interacting with his colleagues.

“Since I went on the bench in 1994, I have sat exclusively in Erie. As a result, I would only see the other members of the court at monthly Board of Judges meetings or at court retreats,” he said. “Since I will be in Pittsburgh at least two days every week, I will now be able to see my colleagues more often. We have a very collegial court and I very much look forward to working with all of the other judges.”

McLaughlin feels privileged to have served during the tenure of four superb chief judges, including Lancaster, Donald Ziegler, D. Brooks Smith and Donetta Ambrose.

“Judge McLaughlin has been a respected and admired member of our court for 20 years. He will be a stellar chief,” said Ambrose. “He is extremely bright and has outstanding organizational and administrative skills. Most importantly, he has always maintained a very warm and collegial relationship with his colleagues and the bar, a quality which will well serve the Western District.”

Chief Magistrate Judge Lisa Lenihan said McLaughlin has been “in training” to take over as chief judge for the past two years by spending time with Lancaster and meeting with the other judges and members of the bar association in Pittsburgh.

“Anyone who has practiced before him knows that he works extremely hard and is exceptionally bright. That makes for quite a powerful combination,” said Lenihan. “He has already made an effort to personally visit all of the judges on the court to ask if there is anything that we would like him to consider as the court moves forward. I think he will be an excellent chief judge and I welcome his oversight and leadership.”

Magistrate Judge Susan Baxter, who also serves on the bench in Erie, is grateful that McLaughlin has been supportive of the magisterial system during his tenure. She pointed out that he is extremely prepared for every case and his diligence is evident with every question he asks from the bench and every opinion he issues.

“As a colleague, I have appreciated his competence and his support. No one works harder than he does or brings more integrity to his cases,” she said. “He also has an enjoyable dry wit, which can catch you off guard, particularly on April Fool’s Day.”

Chief Judge Thomas Agresti of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Western District said McLaughlin is uniquely qualified to seamlessly continue the current direction and vision of the court. In addition, he believes McLaughlin will maintain a close working relationship with the judges of the district court, the bankruptcy court and the magistrate judge system.

“Prior to going on the bench, he was regarded as an experienced and highly professional trial lawyer known for his thorough and detailed preparation in handling a case. As a judge, he is likewise known for being knowledgeable, hard working, even tempered, thoughtful and open minded,” said Agresti. “As a result of these personal attributes, he has earned a reputation as one of our more highly respected district court judges. In overseeing and tackling the complexities and many issues confronting the administration of an entire court system, these character traits will serve the district well in coming years.”

District Judge Mark Hornak said that while the entire court is saddened by the sudden loss of Lancaster, McLaughlin will bring his own brand of energy and enthusiasm to the position.

“I am confident that he will continue the work of our past chiefs in our court’s leadership nationally in case management, patent litigation, electronic discovery and alternative dispute resolution,” said Hornak. “He is highly regarded by both the bench and the bar and has the great people skills essential to leadership of the court.”
